PrEP Conference for Providers

Preventing HIV with One Pill a Day: Using PrEP in Clinical Practice

Date: April 1, 2016 8:30 am-2:00 pm

Location: Fenway Health, 9th and 10th Floors, 1340
Boylston Street, Boston, MA 02215

You are invited to attend an educational conference focused on teaching providers how to incorporate PrEP into their clinical practice. PrEP, or pre-exposure prophylaxis, is a once-daily HIV prevention pill with the potential to make a significant contribution to ending the HIV/AIDS epidemic. The conference is for primary care providers or other relevant providers interested in becoming more knowledgeable about prescribing and monitoring

PrEP.

Led by clinical, educational, and research experts in PrEP, the program will include:

- in-depth case studies
- a panel of patients and outreach specialists providing their perspectives on PrEP
- and a panel on billing and models of care.

Application for CME/CEU credit has been filed with the American Academy of Family Physicians. Determination of credit is pending.

The conference is being co-sponsored by the New England AIDS and Education Training Center.

Upcoming Webinars

Structural Stigma and the Health of Lesbian, Gay, and Bisexual Populations

Faculty: Mark L. Hatzenbuehler, PhD, Associate Professor, Department of Sociomedical Sciences, and Co-Director, Center for the Study of Social Inequalities and Health, Columbia University Mailman School of Public Health

Sponsor: The National LGBT Health Education Center and the National Center for Innovation in HIV Care

Date/Time: Thursday, February 11, 2016, 1:00-2:00pm ET

Psychological research has made significant advancements in the study of stigma but has tended to focus almost exclusively on individual and interpersonal stigma processes. Recently, researchers have expanded the stigma construct to consider how broader, macrosocial forms of stigma-what we call structural stigma-also disadvantage stigmatized individuals. In this webinar, Dr. Mark L. Hatzenbuehler of the Columbia University Mailman School of Public Health will review current research demonstrating that structural stigma has far-reaching health consequences for lesbian, gay, and bisexual (LGB) people. Dr. Hatzenbuehler will also examine future directions for structural stigma research, including exploring how providers at health centers, ASOs, CBOs, and other health care organizations can mitigate the effects of structural stigma with their LGB patients.

Reducing HIV Health Disparities: Examining Funding, Policy, and Beliefs to Drive Local Action

Faculty: Jeffrey Crowley, Distinguished Scholar and Program Director, National HIV/AIDS Initiative, O'Neill Institute for National and Global Health Law, Georgetown Law Center

Sponsor: The National Center for Innovation in HIV Care

Date/Time: Wednesday, February 17th, 2016, 2:00-3:00pm ET

Much excitement has been generated in recent years by the National HIV/AIDS Strategy, scientific advances, and expanded health care access that leads many to assert that we can move toward ending the HIV epidemic in the United States. At the same time, there is frequently a disconnect between excitement about the national picture and the reality in local communities. This session will examine how policy change is made at the federal, state, and local levels, assess recent changes in federal funding and policy, and explore how personal and community beliefs and attitudes drive efforts to better respond to HIV. The end result will not lead to giving health centers, community based organizations, or other community stakeholders answers on how to set meaningful goals, but it will strive to give participants a framework for assessing their own community priorities, resources, and commitment to develop their own strategic goals for action.
